Dear friends,

This Sunday, and for a number of Sundays ahead, we will hear from the Letter of St. Paul to the Romans. Saint Paul's letter to the Romans is his most theological work, and often regarded as his most important. It is certainly his longest. There was an early Christian community in Rome, possibly dating from the time of Pentecost when the church first proclaimed the message of the Gospel. A Roman historian records that a number of Jews were expelled from Rome around 49AD for creating disturbances about a person named "Chrestus" which many believe refers to Christ. So there was a group of Jewish Christians living in the Imperial capital and Paul writes to them partly to enlist their support for his proposed mission to Spain, known as "the extremities of the West". Romans would have been more familiar with Spain than Paul, as he had only limited experience of the West, and its geography, customs or languages. As one biblical scholar has noted, "To win their support Paul must first dispel the perception that he was overthrowing Judaism. This leads Paul to give a magisterial exposition of teaching on the Law and on salvation in Christ.... The Law gave only consciousness of sin, and by so doing intensified sin without providing the means to transcend Sin. By contrast, in Romans Paul presents Christ's work in two ways, as an act of cultic atonement (3:25) and as an act of obedience (5:12-21). Christ's perfect obedience undoes the disobedience of Adam or of the human race as a whole. By baptism the Christian is plunged into Christ's death so as to share Christ's risen life (6:1-11). In the Spirit not only the Christian but the whole world is reconciled to God and renewed (8:18-25). Free from the external restraint of the Law, the Christian is empowered by the indwelling of the Spirit ." Over the coming weeks, we might pay close attention to the words of Paul in the second reading. Fr. Anthony
