Dear friends,

I am only a couple of years older than Shane Warne (even though I look much younger), so the suddenness of his death has a striking impact. Some lives seem detached from the realities of this world, particularly celebrities who seem to exist on a much larger canvass than we ordinary folk.

But in the end, even superstars must confront their mortality, and leave this earthly realm, no matter how prematurely. As someone said, "If Warnie can die, it could happen to any of us". It will happen to us all; let us pray that we are ready when the moment comes and all those prayers uttered and sighed from the depths—"now and at the hour of death"—will carry into the world that awaits.

St. Paul prods our thinking about mortality and eternity today. He tells us that our true homeland is in heaven, and this fleshy body of demise and decay will be transformed into an image of the glorified body of Christ. This is the Christian perspective on death and finitude for no earthly body lasts forever. While we live, merrily ignoring the inescapable end result, St. Paul wants us to think about our true destination.

St. Paul wants us to consider the inconceivable; that the best is yet to come. And he adds, "Do not give way but remain faithful". In other words, do not fall into despair, or be swallowed up in sadness, or be trapped in hopelessness. When we find ourselves jolted by brushes with mortality—our own and others—we are invited to contemplate this promise of consolation.

St. Paul's hope-filled image is not a glib remedy for our real fears of death or the anguished grief of separation, but the power of the insistent and gentle promise that is whispered in the midst of life's darkness. These are not the sentimental utterances which reduce people's "eternity" to the length of our memory or the space of our hearts. This is about what God intends for every human being: a life freed from decay and finitude, gifted with a "body" transformed by the power of Love and Life. Who knows what this transfiguring will look like or feel but it remains our hope, not crafted in fantasy, but fashioned by trust that the compass of the human heart knows precisely where to find our fulfilment.

Biru 30, lives in a rural village in Jharkand State in India’s east. He lost mobility in one of his legs, after contracting polio as a child, which makes it difficult for him to walk. With your generous support, Biru was able to access an entrepreneurship and livelihoods development program, run by Caritas Australia’s partner, Caritas India. He gained the skills, support and encouragement he needed to establish his own bicycle repair business.

Now, Biru is able to provide a good life for his family – and an essential service to his community. He has discovered a sense of pride, confidence and hope which has inspired others living with a disability and paved the way For All Future Generations.

Please donate to Project Compassion 2022 and help people living with disabilities in India gain access to education and clean water, empowering them with skills to build a better future for all.
